Dear Ms. Lee:

On February 4, 1983, Dollar Savings Bank of New York was merged with Dry Dock Savings Bank to form Dollar Dry Dock Savings Bank of New York. The name of the Bank was then changed to Dollar Dry Dock Savings Bank, and subsequently to Dollar Dry Dock Bank. On February 21, 1992, the Superintendent of Banks for the State of New York declared Dollar Dry Dock Bank (the "Bank") to be in an unsafe and unsound condition and appointed the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (the "FDIC") Receiver of the Bank. The majority of the Bank's assets were subsequently sold by the FDIC to Emigrant Savings Bank ("Emigrant"). Thus Emigrant Savings Bank now holds the obligation associated with the above-referenced recordation.

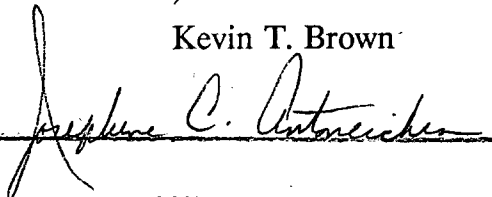

Please be advised that the obligation underlying the above-referenced recordation has been satisfied as of this date. Therefore, we respectfully request that the underlying documentation be released.

Please feel free to call me at (914) 397-1494 if there are any problems or questions.

Very truly yours,

Kevin T. Brown
